Top tips for the perfect gift list

ANYONE who's ever been invited to a wedding will know the dreaded feeling of apprehension which comes when you start to think about the gift you're going to buy for the happy couple.

Likewise, many married couples will tell you there's nothing worse than receiving the same gift five times from guests with the best of intentions.

Traditionally wedding gifts are given as a way of helping young couples on their way to starting up home together, but it can be frustrating trying to think of an original gift idea for the home.

The result? A whole family of dinner sets and enough toasters to set up an electrical goods store!

Which is where the idea of wedding gift lists come in.

And it can be a tricky one, as some couples feel they're perhaps coming across as too assuming if they ask guests to choose an item from the list.

However many guests (particularly those who are prone to leaving their shopping to the last minute) see the gift list as a useful way of ensuring the couple receive something they actually want or need.

And nowadays, a multitude of stores offer wedding gift lists to couples.

If you are thinking of putting together a gift list for your wedding, most stores will tell you that the best way to go about it is to have a walk around the store and make a list of items you want.

Guests will then be able to telephone, visit the store themselves or go online and see which gifts have been listed, and those which have already been bought by someone.

Once again, some couples may encounter the problem of worrying about the price of gifts on the list.

Yet wedding experts advise that this shouldn't prove a major setback, as some guests may actually prefer to purchase one of the more expensive gifts, particularly if they're a close family member or friend.

Think of items which take in all budgets - these can include everything from wine glasses, steak knives and candles, to fridges, washing machines and televisions.

The best advice if you are thinking of compiling a gift list is ultimately to visit one of the stores which do offer the service.

They will provide you with all the information and guidance you need and will be only too glad to help.

Bridal beauty secrets!

MOST prospective brides will tell you that, ever since they were a little girl, they've dreamed of the moment they take those all important steps down the aisle to marry their Prince Charming.

And every bride deserves to look her best on this once in a lifetime occasion, to have the perfect skin, make-up and hairstyle to make for the perfect day.

Hair

The best advice will ultimately have to come from the person who will be doing your hair for you.

Whether this person is a close friend or a professional hairdresser, you'll need to give them some idea of what style you want - and definitely don't want.

For instance, you may want to go for an 'up do', which can be great to show off the facial features and the neckline of the dress.

On the other hand, you may choose to wear your hair down, and there are endless ways in which you can add a little 'va-va-voom' to your locks!

Your hairdresser will also be able to provide you with examples of what kind of styles are give him/her some idea (without revealing too much of course!) about the wedding gown.

The face

It's hard to imagine any other occasion in your life when you will be expected to smile for the camera as much as on your wedding day!

So you'll want to look radiant throughout the day, with as little 'touching up' required as possible.

There are a few tried and tested guidelines to consider when applying your make-up.

For instance, it's good advice to test foundation on your face in natural daylight. According to the experts, this is because the skin on your hand won't match that on your face.

They also advise staying away from a darker shade if you want to look tanned.

Allow your moisturiser five minutes to sink in before you apply the foundation.

This will give you the best possible base and ensure your make-up lasts longer. Then seal the look with pressed powder.

Contrary to what many women believe, less is definitely more when it comes to foundation.

It's best to apply small amounts with a damp sponge and blend it in well, taking particular care with the jawline.

An age-old tip for luscious lips is to remove dead skin gently with an old toothbrush and a little cream.

Mother of the bride role explained

THE mother of the bride role is a proud and happy one - watching your daughter get married will be a wonderful experience and is going to leave you with so many happy memories.

As mother of the bride it is likely that you will be very involved in the wedding planning and on the big day. If you are feeling unsure about what is expected of you or how you can help then have a chat with your daughter and let her know you are happy to help and between you both, you can decide what to do and what makes you both happy.

Typical mother of the bride duties

If you're not sure where to start with helping your daughter in the run up to her big day then take a look at some of the typical mother of the bride duties that she may want you to be involved in.

Offer some wedding planning advice

If you have planned a wedding before then you will be in the perfect position to give advice on where to get started. The first thing you will probably do is to give your daughter calm advice on where to start and let her know that you are there to help when she needs.

Talk about financial support

Traditionally it used to be expected that the bride's parents paid for the wedding in full but - thankfully for your bank balance - times have moved on and the majority of couples are footing the bill for their big day. However if you do want to contribute financially to the wedding then let your daughter know early on in her wedding planning so she can factor this money into her budget.

If you are offering financial support then you will also want to discuss what this means - are you giving the money as a gift and transferring the full amount to them? Do you want the couple to send you the invoices to pay? Do you expect to have a say in the wedding or the guest list in return for footing part of the bill? These are all things that would be helpful to discuss early on to avoid any confusion or miscommunication and to manage expectations.

Go wedding dress shopping

One of the most exciting things about being the mother of the bride is that you get to go wedding dress shopping with your daughter. This will be a fun and emotional experience that you are always going to remember so be on hand to offer advice, support and to keep your daughter calm throughout the process.

Helping the bride get ready in the morning will be a special time - your daughter will be feeling exciting and nervous and the number one thing she probably wants that morning is her mum. So whether you are there to help her get into her dress, wipe her tears away or pour the champagne, just make sure you are present on the morning of the wedding. Aim to get ready early so that in the hour or two before the ceremony you are there to help in any way that you can.

Play host on the big day

The happy couple will be the main focus of the day but they might struggle to mingle and chat with absolutely everyone and this is where their parents can really help. Take the time to chat to guests, thank them for coming, ensure everything is running smoothly and just generally make sure the day is running smoothly.

What should the mother of the bride wear?

The wedding day will be a long day so the most important thing is that you wear something you feel comfortable and happy in. There are no rules to say you have to wear a dress or that you have to match the colour scheme. If you are feeling unsure then speak to your daughter, she may want you to wear something in a similar shade to the wedding colours so you look part of the bridal party or she may want you to choose whatever you want! Why not go shopping with your daughter so you have someone to offer their opinion and help you feel you're most fabulous for the wedding day.

Keeping kids entertained at a wedding

THE reality of a wedding is that they can be long and boring for kids. It's a common dilemma for couples who'd love to invite family and friends' little ones but fear screaming, tantrums and kids running riot.

If you're inviting young guests, it's best to have some games and activities on hand to keep them entertained.

Whether it's keeping kids quiet during the ceremony or giving their parents a chance to let their hair down at the reception, happy, well-behaved child guests are totally possible. And if the kids are happy, so are the parents!

Kids wedding activities don't need to cost a huge amount either. We've got some great ideas like princess parties and gaming stations if you want to go all out. But if you're doing kids wedding entertainment on a budget, there's plenty for you too.

1. Outdoor games

Giant Jenga or Connect 4, Twister, a piñata or a ring toss will keep everyone entertained and are a great bit of nostalgia for older guests. If your budget won't stretch to buying new, ask around your guests what they've got hiding in their shed.

2. Kids tea

Wedding food is rarely kid-friendly. Throw them their own tea party on a separate table with food they'll love like sausage rolls and pizza slices. It'll keep them full and in a good mood, plus it's cheaper for you! A sweet station is a great addition here too. Set up a pick 'n' mix stand with lots of their favourite sweets (although you might need to limit them to only one bag!)

3. Video game station

Either pull out your old Nintendo 64 and set it up in a side room, or you can hire amazing retro arcade games and consoles from companies. Young guests will be enthralled (and occupied kids means no running around!) and we bet a few adults will be desperate to beat their old PB on Pac-Man.

4. Goody bags

A colouring book can keep little ones quiet during the ceremony. Ushers can hand them all an activity goody bag when they sit down with some cheap pound shop purchases, like crayons, an activity book, bubbles, Play-Doh or a couple of fancy dress items. You can also buy convenient ready-made wedding activity packs if you've already got a lot on your plate.

5. A photo treasure hunt

Buy disposable cameras and give kids a list of photos they need to 'collect', like a picture of the cake being cut or the bride and groom kissing. You can print out their pictures for them as a nice reminder of the day. Hey, you might even find a photo you want framed among them!

Darver Castle dates back to the 15th Century and is situated on 50 acres of fine parkland in the rolling countryside of County Louth. It has been lovingly restored by the Carville family, who continue to care for it.

We are fully committed to making your wedding the most memorable day of your life, therefore we only cater one wedding per day, this ensures total privacy. We can cater for up to 280 guests and we have a total of 41 bedrooms on site.

Our castle provides a unique homely setting for you and your guests to celebrate at ease..
